

Thanks to your investment in Bible translation, the Kerewe translation project is off to a strong start!

The first draft of Luke is under review. Work continues on Acts. Rev. Domisian Alloys is now serving as Assistant Translation Coordinator. The team is transitioning to the use of Paratext, the standard in translation software. Discussions are underway to establish a Kerewe translation committee to assist in planning, review, and community relations.

Though COVID-19 caused the cancellation of several community awareness activities, Kerewe speakers are learning about the translation project—and they are elated!

“The woman who printed the Luke draft copies is looking forward to one day having her own copy of the Kewere New Testament,” reports Rev. Andrew Olson. “She and many others received news about the project with great jubliation.”

Your care and compassion is bearing fruit that will impact the Kerewe community for generations to come. Church attendance has increased in some areas as people anticipate the day when worship will be conducted completely in Kerewe. Said one man, “Thank you for the work your team has done. The Bible is so good to hear in my language.”
