THE NEW TESTAMENT published in the Northern Grebo dialect of Liberia does not communicate God's Word clearly to those living in the southeastern region of the country. Lack of Scripture materials hampers efforts to spread the Gospel among those who speak several different Grebo dialects in this area.

A comprehensive language survey will be conducted in four counties by Bible society personnel. A linguist/translation consultant will build relationships with local leaders while exploring Scripture needs. Final documentation will suggest specific translation projects that will provide Grebo speakers with the opportunity to hear and interact with God's Word.
