LANGUAGE EXPLORATION USES APPRECIATIVE INQUIRY – listening to the communities' unique Scripture needs. This approach takes time but leads to greater openness to and acceptance of God's Word.

One goal is to identify, equip, and empower community leaders for translation work. A second goal is to update translation databases with current information. These two goals can help identify and organize a project cluster (where an advisor oversees several projects simultaneously).

The recent Southern Africa Bible Translation Summit helped identify two project clusters across the Botswana and Namibia borders. Research and information gathering will begin in 2023. The summit also led to connections that will equip veteran translators with training and knowledge to serve other language communities with future Bible translation projects.
