ESTHER BUNDOR HAD NO OPPORTUNITY for formal education. The expectation was to stay home and care for her family. She felt discouraged, even ashamed, at her lack of education.

Then a Kissi literacy class started. Esther recognized the opportunity to receive the education she wanted, which would equip her to read the Bible in her own language, and she enrolled. “The Kissi literacy program has given me a sense of pride.” Esther now serves as secretary for the local women’s club and her church’s women’s organization.

The primary goal of the Kissi program is to promote God’s Word through literacy, translation, training, and service to God and man. Volunteer teachers and workers receive training through the program and address the needs of people like Esther. Literacy gives the capability to read the Word of God and claim it as their own.
