THE WAYEYI PEOPLE SPEAK SHIYEYI, and they are eager to have Scripture in their language. Knowing that God speaks their language brings a new sense of dignity and self-worth to a people that has often been forgotten or ignored.

An important part of every translation project is community review - the community is asked if they can understand it. This helps the translation team make edits and adjustments that will ensure the completed manuscript is clear and accurate. Team review and community review of the Wayeyi New Testament is now underway.

The completed Gospel of Mark has been printed and distributed. Churches continue to request for bulk copies to distribute during their evangelism activities. An energized project advisory committee continues to encourage Scripture use in church and community life.
